CANADIAN DERMATOLOGY ASSOCIATION BESTOWS AWARD OF HONOUR ON RICHARD J. MacKAY

Highest award for pharmaceutical executive.

Richard J. MacKay, President of Stiefel Canada Inc., was presented with the Canadian Dermatology Association's new Award of Honour at the CDA 2003 annual conference held in Ottawa, the highest award for a person who is not a member of the medical profession.

Citing Dick MacKay's many accomplishments and tremendous contribution to dermatology, CDA President Kirk Barber said that this prestigious award recognized Mr. MacKay's service to Canadians in raising the standards of health care.

Richard J. MacKay established Stiefel Canada with a selected line of dermatological products in 1976. During his stewardship Stiefel Canada has grown dynamically, and now ranks as the leading dermatology company in Canada. The product line includes Clindoxyl and Stievamycin — highly acclaimed, innovative acne therapies with a leading share of market.

In his 45 years in the Canadian pharma industry, Dick MacKay has been active in many organizations and for the past 20 years has served on the Board of the Canadian Dermatology Foundation, an organization devoted to raising funds for advancing dermatological research.
